

A Woman's Dreaming

Sharon McAvoy (2007)

“Women taking care of Women” is represented throughout the colour palette in this painting, which enforces the feeling of femininity.

The large U shapes symbolise the women (Mothers, Aunties, Grandmothers and friends), and the smaller apricot u shapes represent our children. It is important to care for ourselves, each other, and our children.

The solid purple represents the women's breast and our focus to increase awareness of early detection.

The white dots throughout the painting highlight the importance of screening and sharing this message. The black paths on the inside of the dots represent carrying this message to all communities.

The green bush berries and blue witchety grubs symbolise healthy eating and a focus on wellbeing.
